2009 C2C Awards

Innovation in Teaching Award

Jeff Merritt

Johnson County Community College

“Jeff’s course site is extremely well organized, learner friendly and student oriented. It far exceeds the materials provided by the publishers of the textbook. On a weekly basis, I hear students expound on how much the website has helped them to learn the material. Jeff follows best practice in his online course design and teaching. He is most deserving of this award”

Jonathan Bacon Leadership Award

Dr. Chris Crawford

Fort Hays State University

“Dr. Chris Crawford, through his leadership, has been a key component and champion of the integration of instructional and learning technologies into this campus community. Fort Hays State University is well positioned for the future from a cultural and infrastructure standpoint, and our students, both present and future, will benefit from the results of his leadership.”

Outstanding Technical Support Award

Brenda Wilson

University of Central Missouri

“Brenda is well organized, detail oriented, and self motivated. She goes above and beyond for distance learning. She is the first one to ask how a new policy or procedure will affect our students. She is their advocate who is always there to spend endless time answering their questions, holding their hand (electronically of course), and does not stop until she finds the answers they need. She deplores the “bounce” from office to office that students often get over the phone. Brenda is deserving of an award for outstanding support ”
