A faculty member wants help with software to “rip” segments from a DVD to use for a presentation in class. Assume the conditions of the TEACH Act will be met.

- Can IS rip the DVD?
- Would it matter if the movie were on Blue Ray or if it were from an online distribution service?
“To Rip or Not to Rip, That is the Question!”

(a)(1)(A) No person shall circumvent a technological measure that effectively controls access to a work protected under this title.

(2) No person shall manufacture, import, offer to the public, provide, or otherwise traffic in any technology, product, service, device, component, or part thereof, that--

(A) is primarily designed or produced for the purpose of circumventing a technological measure that effectively controls access to a work protected under this title . . . .

(3) As used in this subsection--

(A) to "circumvent a technological measure" means to descramble a scrambled work, to decrypt an encrypted work, or otherwise to avoid, bypass, remove, deactivate, or impair a technological measure, without the authority of the copyright owner. . . .
No Fair Use or Teach Act Exception for Circumvention!

2012 Copyright Office: Triennial Exceptions

1. Is the motion picture contained on DVD (not a Blue Ray) with CSS or is it “acquired via online distribution” with Technological Protection Measures (“TPM”)?

2. Is the use for general “educational purposes” or for “film studies or other courses requiring close analysis of film”?

An affirmative answer to either case 1 means that an exception may apply. However, note that the rule would not apply to Blue Ray discs.

The answer to 2 matters. For general “educational purposes,” you may only use screen capture technology on a lawfully decrypted copy. But for “film studies,” you can use a “ripper” or decrypter.

In either case, you may only use “short portions.”
